Just a few short years after their first meeting, Filisko and Noden are displaying their compelling musicality on the world stage. They've performed at the legendary Chicago Blues Festival, the Paramount Blues Festival in Grafton, Wisconsin (where some of the greatest of the early blues recordings were made); Sweden's Eslov Blues Festival; and the Festival Ecaussines in Belgium. The duo also recorded the theme song for the "Sweet Folk Chicago" on the legendary Chicago radio station WFMT. Joe and Eric are expert practitioners of harmonica and guitar styles that defined the blues in its earliest days but are now all too rarely heard. Both of these standout performers also teach and make it a point to share the insights they've gained from two lifetimes of deep research into the history of the music. For several years the city of Trossingen, Germany—the home of the Hohner harmonica company—has invited Filisko and Noden to conduct master workshops, and the pair has also offered joint workshops and performances at Australia's Playmakers Festival, the Harmonicales Festival in France, and at the Old Town School of Folk Music in Chicago.

Joe Filisko and Eric Noden's stellar debut recording, "Live," pays homage to the deepest of those fabled blues traditions, but they are no stuffy traditionalists intent on recreating the recordings of past masters. Their latest recording, "I.C. Special," features 15 knockout original tunes that demonstrate how they are using their mastery of classic styles to create an exhilarating, new approach to the blues. The recordings of Filisko and Noden document their joint journey from total immersion in the richest and most complex classic blues stylings to vibrant, original, 21st-century music that moves the blues forward. Each performer brings unique qualities to the duo. --- rootsduo.com
