In many photographs of disco, Jimmy Johnson's recording career begins with the Delmark LPs Johnson's Whacks (1979) and North/South (1982). Tobacco Road, 1978 on the French label MCM appeared, but was the first blues album by Jimmy Johnson. It was recorded live (without audience!) in Chicago with one on two guitars (Jimmy Johnson, David Matthews), bass (Ike Anderson) and drums (Dino Neal) of Marcelle Morgantini on 19 October 1977 in the Westside Club. Johnson with a high, soul infected voice sings and plays guitar in the tradition of three kings. He interpreted "Sweet Little Angel", by B.B. King, "Breaking Up Somebody's Home". "Look Over Yonder" comes from Elmore James. The title track of "Tobacco Road", a classic, is known in versions by the Blues Magoos, Eric Burdon, Lou Rawls, Edgar Winter, etc. On the 1997 reissue of Storyville records, four bonus tracks, an instrumental, two Wilson Pickett hits ("Engine No. 9", "In The Midnight Hour"), which occupy the temporary home of Jimmy Johnson in the soul genre in the 1970s and the jazzy "Take Five" by Dave Brubeck, once again released later on Johnson's Whacks. The album features an hour of good Blues! --- Bluesbreaker, avxhome.se
