

Jeff Michaels – Working For The Enemy (2014)

Written by bluesever

Wednesday, 01 May 2019 15:26 - Last Updated Saturday, 27 February 2021 11:53

Jeff Michaels – Working For The Enemy (2014)

*01 Cry Out 3:42 02 Black Water 3:15 03 Spread My Wings 3:14 04 Take A Ride 5:34
05 Working For The Enemy 4:43 06 Joe's Garage 4:40 07 It's Ok 2:37 08 Memories 7:17*

Packed with unparalleled musicianship and teeming with quite the engaging collection of songs, Jeff Michaels is guaranteed to knock out fans and critics alike. Born in St. Louis and raised in Houston before making his way to Austin, he lived on a steady diet of working ice houses and roadhouses all around the bayou city since the age of 14. From playing in the middle of farm country to the 5th ward, to playing rock gigs in the middle; he's got an eclectic, diverse history. Flash forward many years, with so much rich experience, and you've got a highly sought after, engaging, charming gentleman with impeccable skills; absolutely deadly with a strat and a live mic.

By continually exceeding his own high artistic goals, Michaels' is bound to shatter all other expectations and reach new audiences – no mean feat when you continue his astonishing track record. "Gritty Music for Scrappy People" is Michaels' latest; come in, dry off, have a drink and listen to the soul-nourishing, all-out soul attack of the almighty power of Jeff's dirty grifter riffs rolling out of walls of marshalls.

"Jeff Michaels is a highly unique artist that more people should know about, if only for his guitar work alone - but the voice is pure gritty blues velvet" ---Blues & Jazz Magazine, cdbaby.com download (mp3 @320 kbs):

Jeff Michaels – Working For The Enemy (2014)

Written by bluesever

Wednesday, 01 May 2019 15:26 - Last Updated Saturday, 27 February 2021 11:53

yandex mediafire ulozto solidfiles global-files

back