Hong Kong Philharmonic Orchestra Takako Nishizaki – violin Kenneth Schermerhorn - conductor

This record declares that what [Cui] wanted to write was music of total charm; it declares, too, that he managed to do this with total success. The Suite concertante, for example: could not this be found by many to be one of the most immediately enjoyable sequences of music for solo violin and orchestra they have ever heard? . . . The enjoyability of all the music is helped along greatly by the quality of its performance. Takako Nishizaki is among the most winning of soloists; and the quality of the Hong Kong Philharmonic is one of the newer wonders to add to all those older wonders of one of the most astonishing cities on earth. – Gramophone, arkivmusic.com
