Christlieb Sigmund Binder (bap. 29 Jul. 1723 - 1 Jan. 1789) - German harpsichordist, organist, and composer. He was organist at Dresden. A very prolific composer, Binder was one of the first to adopt the “elegant” style in his instrumental and symphonic works.

Christlieb Sigmund Binder is described by some writers as Dresden’s answer to Carl Philipp Emmanuel Bach; if these concertos, printed in 1759, are typical, then that is an exaggeration. Though tuneful and not without exciting outer movements, they are fairly workaday and rarely deviate from the mid-18th-century norm.
