I first learned of this singer when I was reading a book titled The Arrogant Years it described a songstress from the 1950's who had a very popular show every Sunday night in Cairo Egypt not only did she sing in Arabic, French, Italian & German she seems to have embodied the culture of the City of Cairo of an era when all the different cultures and religions lived in harmony. I was very interested in hearing her sing especially when I found out she was Italian and had produced several albums in Italian (which I am still waiting for from Amazon) but no worries I have found several recordings on utube, check it out she does a duet with Julio Englesias (La Vie en Rose). I really enjoy listening to her sing in any language she really had a style and elegance. ---Giulia, amazon.com
