The Rolling Stones recorded in the U.S. for the first time, at famed Chess Studios on South Michigan Avenue in June 1964. They recorded their single 'It's All Over Now', as well as songs such as 'Down the Road Apiece', 'Time Is on My Side' and 'Look What You've Done'. The band also meet Muddy Waters, Chuck Berry, Willie Dixon and Buddy Guy. They returned again in November 1964 and May 1965. Also recorded at Chess Studios was the band's song '2120 South Michigan Avenue', named in tribute to Chess Records, which appeared on their EP Five By Five and their 2nd US album 12x5, both in 1964.

"2120 South Michigan Avenue was hallowed ground," writes Keith Richards in his 2010 autobiography. "There in the perfect sound studio, in the room where everything we'd listened to was made...we recorded fourteen tracks in two days. One of them was... 'It's All Over Now,' our first number one hit." ---choosechicago.com
