When keyboardist Keith Godchaux joined the Grateful Dead for the band's Fall '71 tour, he changed the group's sound significantly with his barrel-house performance style that gave new life to their tunes. Godchaux hit the ground running as many of the shows from that first tour were outstanding. Yet, over the past 20 years only two performances from that fabled tour have been officially released by the band. With the release of Dave's Picks Volume 3, featuring the complete October 22, '71 concert from Chicago's Auditorium Theatre on two discs, with a third disc containing highlights from the previous night, we'll get to hear a fully remastered recording from Fall '71.
