This extremely impressive debut is replete with smooth-sounding ballads and uplifting dance/R&B cuts. Carey convincingly seizes many opportunities to display her incredible vocal range on such memorable tracks as the popular "Vision of Love" (featured during her television debut on The Arsenio Hall Show, an appearance noted by many as her formal introduction to stardom), the energetic "Someday," and the moody sounds of the hidden treasure "Vanishing." With this collection of songs acting as a springboard for future successes, Carey establishes a strong standard of comparison for other breakthrough artists of this genre. ---Ashley S. Battel, AllMusic Review

Coached by her mother (an opera singer), Carey wrote her first songs with keyboardist Ben Margulies, while working as a waitress and janitor. She struck gold after she was signed (and romanced) by Columbia executive Tommy Mottola at a party. Her debut album, Mariah Carey (Columbia, 1990), spawned five hits: Vision Of Love, There's Got to Be a Better Way, Love Takes Time, the ballad that established her as one of the greatest interpreters of her time, the Madonna-inspired dance of Someday and the heartbreaking ballad I Don't Wanna Cry. The album will sell six million copies in ten years. ---scaruffi.com
