

Sam Cooke – Live At Harlem Square Club (1963)

Wpisany przez bluelover

Wtorek, 13 Październik 2009 21:04 - Zmieniony Niedziela, 09 Lipiec 2017 12:12

---

Sam Cooke – Live At Harlem Square Club (1963)

1. "Feel It" (Wilson Pickett) – 3:46 2. "Chain Gang" (Cooke) – 3:11 3. "Cupid" (Cooke) – 2:46 4. "Medley: It's All Right/For Sentimental Reasons" – 5:11 5. "Twistin' the Night Away" (Cooke) – 4:19 6. "Somebody Have Mercy" (Cooke) – 4:45 7. "Bring It On Home to Me" (Cooke) – 5:37 8. "Nothing Can Change This Love" (Cooke) – 3:45 9. "Having a Party" (Cooke) – 4:09 Sam Cooke - Vocals Cornell Dupree - Guitar Albert "Gentleman June" Gardner - Drums Tate Houston - Saxophone King Curtis - Saxophone Jimmy Lewis - Bass George Stubbs - Piano Clifton White - Guitar

Not only is this one of the greatest live soul albums ever released, it also reveals a rougher, rawer, and more immediate side to Sam Cooke that his singles only hinted at, good as they were. Working with a merged band that included guitarist Cliff White and drummer Albert "June" Gardner from Cooke's regular touring outfit and saxophonist King Curtis and his band, Cooke brings a gospel fervor to these whirlwind versions, which are fiery, emotionally direct, and hit with uncommon power. Every track burns with an insistent, urgent feel, and although Cooke practically defines melisma on his single releases, here he reaches past that into deeper territory that finds him almost literally shoving and pushing each song forward with shouts, asides, and spoken interactions with the audience, which becomes as much a part of this set as any bandmember. "Chain Gang" is stripped down to a raw nerve, "Twistin' the Night Away" explodes out of the gate like a runaway rocket, and Curtis' sax breaks on "Somebody Have Mercy" make it sound like the saxophone was invented for this one song alone. Throughout Cooke's voice is a raspy laser that makes it obvious what Rod Stewart picked up from this recording, and it is impossible not to hear Cooke's voice looming behind Stewart's once you've heard this amazing live set. Although recorded January 12, 1963, at the Harlem Square Club in Miami in 1963, RCA didn't release it as an album until 1985. The set was remixed from the original first generation three-track tape for 2000's The Man Who Invented Soul box, and while the music (and Cooke's vocals in particular) sounded much cleaner, much of the crowd noise from the 1985 mixes was toned down, robbing the recording of some of its claustrophobic, frenzied power. The mix used here seems to more or less split the difference, but the crucial key is and was always Cooke's vocals, and while he was a marvelously smooth, versatile, and urbane singer on his official pop recordings, here he explodes into one of the finest sets of raw

Sam Cooke – Live At Harlem Square Club (1963)

Wpisany przez bluelover

Wtorek, 13 Październik 2009 21:04 - Zmieniony Niedziela, 09 Lipiec 2017 12:12

---

secular gospel ever captured on tape. It is essential listening in any version. ---Steve Leggett, AllMusic Review download (mp3 @192 kbs):

yandex 4shared mega mediafire uloz.to cloudmailru gett

back