

Living Colour - Shade (2017)

Wpisany przez bluesever
Czwartek, 28 Czerwiec 2018 10:51 -

---

Living Colour - Shade (2017)

1 Freedom Of Expression (F.O.X.) 2:54 2 Preachin' Blues 4:20 3 Come On 3:22 4 Program 4:43 5 Who Shot Ya 3:38 6 Always Wrong 4:04 7 Blak Out 2:29 8 Pattern In Time 2:56 9 Who's That 4:10 10 Glass Teeth 2:59 11 Invisible 3:44 12 Inner City Blues 4:00 13 Two Sides 5:11 Andre Betts Keyboards, Producer Will Calhoun Drums, Vocals Marc Cary Organ George Clinton Vocals Roosevelt Collier Lap Steel Guitar Jason Craig Vocals Bernard Fowler Vocals Corey Glover Vocals Bernard Hawkins Keyboards, Piano, Programming, Sound Effects Kendra Jones Vocals (Background) Darly "Malachi" Thomas Jr Vocals Shelley Nicole Vocals (Background) Martha Redbone Vocals (Background) Vernon Reid Guitar, Vocals Amma Watt Vocals (Background) Big Sam Williams Trombone Doug Wimbish Bass, Vocals

Shade, the sixth studio album from Living Colour (and the first since 2009's The Chair in the Doorway), opens with an anthemic track full of Vernon Reid's guitar heroics, Corey Glover's impassioned vocals, and a prominent sample from Malcolm X. No, it's not "Cult of Personality," it's called "Freedom of Expression (F.O.X.)," but in a world where African-American hard rock bands are still considered a novelty, you can't blame these guys for thinking not much has changed since their debut album, Vivid, dropped in 1988 -- or at least not as much as a reasonable man would hope. Arriving in 2017, Shade is a somewhat different animal than Living Colour's early (and best-known) work, but there are more similarities than differences. The band's attack is harder and heavier than it was in the '80s, the sly humor that once leavened their albums is largely absent, and their production is more clearly informed by hip-hop in its use of samples and edits, though this is still a hard rock band first and foremost. Shade is also more steeped in the blues than most of Living Colour's previous work, especially on "Who's That" and a fiery cover of Robert Johnson's "Preachin' Blues." But the center of this music is still Vernon Reid's guitar, and he's still a remarkable player, fusing the wail of hard rock, the cry of the blues, and the broad tonal palette of jazz into a musical flamethrower that puts most metal soloists to shame in terms of vision and impact. Glover, bassist Doug Wimbish, and drummer Will Calhoun have the strength and the imagination to keep up with Reid, and while they may take their sweet time between albums, when they come together the results remain taut and satisfying. If defiance and anger are the key operating emotions of many of these songs, that's probably to

Living Colour - Shade (2017)

Wpisany przez bluesever

Czwartek, 28 Czerwiec 2018 10:51 -

---

be expected in 2017, and the full-bodied cover of Marvin Gaye's "Inner City Blues" only points to how many social ills of the '70s are still plaguing us today. But as Joe Strummer once told us, anger can be power, and the musical and emotional furor of Shade is a powerful and much-needed weapon in a chaotic time. ---Mark Deming, allmusic.com

Wydany po ośmioletniej przerwie album „Shade” to niezwykle udany powrót Living Colour do wybornej wręcz formy. Choć muzycy wskazują że punktem wyjścia, a wręcz impulsem do stworzenia nowego albumu był blues w czystej postaci go tu nie znajdziemy. To po prostu Living Colour, najbliższe okresowi „Stain”. Najbliższy bluesowym korzeniom jest utwór Roberta Johnsona „Preachin’ Blues”. Jednak wyraźnie czuć w nim rockową wrażliwość wskazująca na reminiscencje Cream czy też Hendrixa. Wybornie prezentuje się „Who’s That” okraszony partiami trabek, o lekko soulowym posmaku (przypominają się czasy „Time’s Up”). Rockowy „Freedom of Expression” wypada dla zespołu po prostu typowo. Jak zawsze smakowicie wypadają bujające utwory o funkowych reminiscencjach jak chwytliwy „Always Wrong”, „Blak Out” (oh gdyby tak brzmieeli Red Hoci) czy też „Two Sides” w którym możemy usyszeć samego Georga Clintona. Znakomicie wypada również czadowy w stylu Bad Brains „Pattern In Time”. Zresztą cały album jest po prostu znakomity i jawi się jako jedna z najbardziej urozmaiconych stylistycznie płyt Living Colour. ---zatopionywczisy.wordpress.com download (mp3 @320 kbs):

yandex mediafire ulozto cloudmailru gett

back